NAVY BOY

Native of Jeffersontown and Exemplary Young Man.

Dies at Sea From Pneumonia—Charles Louis Hite, Son of Dr. Louis Hite, Passes Away.

The Louisville Times contained the following article, together with a picture of Charles Hite, one day last week:

While Mrs. Louis S. Hite was engaged in writing a letter to her son, Charles, a first-class comber aboard the battleship Mississippi, her husband, Dr. Louis Hite, a veterinarian, who lives at Jeffersontown, handed her a telegram announcing the young man's death at sea. The message came from Gravesend, Eng., where the third division of the North Atlantic fleet is now sojourning. Hite died of pneumonia on November 12 after an illness of three days.

Mrs. Hite received a letter several days ago, which had been written by her seaman son on the night of October 31. In the missive he stated that the Mississippi was about to weigh anchor and begin a cruise that would mean a round of pleasure and sight-seeing for several months to come. He asked his mother to "write soon," and to address the letter to him at Gravesend, Eng. She was engaged in answering this letter when the telegram came.

Charles Louis Hite was 26 years of age. He enlisted in the navy nearly eight years ago, and expected to rejoin the service when his second discharge should be received, March 3, 1911. Hite held the world's record for marksmanship with the six-inch gun for years, and he won several honor medals for target-shooting afterward. He had been promised a commission at the beginning of his third period in the service.

The young man was born and reared at Jeffersontown. Besides his parents, he leaves four brothers, Joseph Hite, George Hite, Rowland Hite and John Hite, and a sister, Miss Margaret Hite. The body was ordered sent to Washington, D. C., from which place the remains will be brought to Jeffersontown and buried with military honors.

TEACHERS

Held Meeting at Middletown—Interesting Paper on Reading Read By Miss Greathouse

The Teachers' Association, which was held on Oct. 29 at Middletown, was held at Middletown, Ky. The Miss H. Wetherby was elected Secretary. All the teachers were present but four and many helpful ideas were exchanged.

Following is a synopsis of the talk on reading, which was given by Miss Greathouse: Possibly all teachers may not agree with me when I tell you that I consider this the most important by far of all school studies.
It is not the key to all stored knowledge? Admitting this to be true, how important is the training of the child from the very beginning.
Require pupils to tell the story of the selection in their own words. This should precede their oral reading, thus finding out what has been done in the way of preparation. If the child does not know the meaning of the selection before hand, instead of being in full sympathy with the author, and able to express his thoughts he will only call the work mechanically.

It is not a sweeping statement to say that three-fourths of the success of every lesson depends upon the interest shown in it by the teacher.
Your questions must be clear and concise.

Be sure to keep your line of thought. Seek selections. Furnish the child not so much with knowledge equipment as with spiritual resources which will be a source of pleasure through life.

Think what beautiful thoughts they get from Kipling's "Recessional." There are several reasons when the poem is applicable to the season for instance—

After a heavy "snow fall" let them go to the windows and look out while you read Whittier's "Snow Bound."

And when on the eve of vacation, when their energies are at low ebb, let them memorize "Riley's knee deep in June."

REPLANNING A FARM.

Points That Must Be Borne In Mind
When Change Is Sought.

In "Replanning a Farm For Profit," the title of farmers' bulletin No. 370, issued by the United States department of agriculture, the matter of changing the type of agriculture on a farm when the old is found to be no longer profitable is treated. The bulletin says:

Habit frequently continues a type of farming in a community long after that type has become unprofitable.
Wheat farming on fertile virgin soil is usually profitable, but there are many instances in the United States where farmers have continued to grow wheat for a number of years after it had ceased to be a profitable crop. The same is true of cotton. A two year rotation of corn and oats has been continued in portions of the corn belt notwithstanding the fact that it is often unprofitable, little or no money being made on either crop. Frequently these unprofitable types of farming continue through a series of years or until the proper changes hands or new methods are introduced. The farmer finds it hard to change a lifelong habit.

A man who has grown up with the agriculture of a community is slow to believe that the type of farming he has followed and which was at one time profitable has at last become unprofitable to his conditions. It is no small task to think out and change his long used type to some better kind of farming. There are several reasons why such a change is difficult. It may mean a new line of equipment. Buildings may need modification or fences must be rearranged. It may mean the introduction of commercial fertilizers or of more or different live stock on the farm. It may mean that money will have to be borrowed if the proposed changes are effected. Furthermore, the change may not succeed. At best the taking up of a new line of farming requires a readjustment of the usual ways of thinking and doing, a thing difficult in itself and requiring considerable time to accomplish.

Notwithstanding habit may set the farmer in his ways, altered conditions and lessened yields and income may compel him to change his system or go out of business. To what shall he change? How shall he go about it?

What type of farming is likely to prove more profitable than the kind he is now following? What additional capital is necessary to institute new and better system? These are the questions that confront him. They are difficult to answer. With pencil and ruler in hand he may estimate the returns that may reasonably be expected by introducing more crops that build up the land, by growing more of the crop that is bringing him in the greatest amount of money, by giving more attention to the live stock that has been found to pay best and the like.

If in these calculations he meets with difficulty because of a lack of definite information as to what may reasonably be expected, then improved methods are applied in the culture of a crop or in the handling of stock he may write to the agricultural college or the board of agriculture or the agricultural experiment station of his own state or to the United States department of agriculture for help. It is the business of these institutions to discover and gather facts relative to the science, practice and business of agriculture for the benefit of the farmer and particularly for the farmer who wishes to improve his methods of farming. The agricultural press also is understandable to aid the farmer in the solution of problems of this character.

In addition to these sources, a few private firms have been established whose business it is to furnish expert advice on farm management for a consideration.

Not always, however, are the institutions just mentioned prepared to give the farmer information on a plan covering his whole farm. The expert farmerman cares to give advice only on farming, the entomologist only on insects and spraying, the pathologist only on plant diseases, the shepherd only on sheep. Not one of them is attempt to co-ordinate all the manifold interests of the farm into a single comprehensive farm plan, and yet this is exactly what the farmer must do every day of his life if he would get the most out of his farm and make farming pay.

The farmer is not simply a corn crafter or a wheat grower or a cattle breeder or a sheep breeder or a poultry raiser, but all of these and more more combined. His farm, therefore, must be planned with reference to all of these operations and the harmonious dovetailing together of the different parts. In replanning his farm for profit the farmer must see all these different problems in a comprehensive way at the outset, omit no important part that do not pay and strengthen those that do.

Fortunately many of our agricultural colleges today are co-ordinating the work of these different departments and giving courses in farm management, and usually suggestions can be obtained from these sources relative to the general management of the firm—not necessarily detailed directions for farming, for it would be as difficult to tell a man how to farm as it is to tell him how to succeed in law, but rather to furnish him a comprehensive plan for managing his farm, corresponding in a way to the plan furnished by the architect to a builder.

It is often said that a farm cannot be planned as other kinds of business are; that the vicissitudes of weather, the visitations of insect pests or plant diseases, the low prices that may prevail when the farmer has to sell and other unforeseen circumstances may interfere to make all farm plans almost worthless from a practical standpoint.

This is often quite true with reference to plans made for a particular year. But when the plans are based on average conditions for a long series of years then the objections do not hold, for, while we cannot tell what may happen during any particular season, we can foretell with considerable accuracy what the average conditions will be over a series, say, of ten years. The whole business of insurance is based on the reliability of averages. It cannot be foretold just who out of a thousand persons will die next year, but it can be stated with much certainty about how many persons out of the thousand will die.
Plans for the farm likewise must represent and be based on average conditions and not on single years. The farm plan must be made for a period of years and not for a single year.

In replanning a farm it is essential that a few fundamental points in farming be kept constantly in mind: First—The plan should provide a reasonable reward for the labor and capital invested.

Second—The fertility of the farm should be maintained or increased.

Third—The plan must be suited to the capabilities of the owner for carrying it out.

It is assumed that in order to replan a farm for profit it is necessary to consider the capabilities of the farmer to put the new plan into effect. This in general will require it necessary to recombine the phases of farming with what is already familiar or to bring in new features which are not very dissimilar to the ones he is already accustomed to.
